

Richmond Times-Dispatch

Entry: United Network for Organ Sharing coverage

Times-Dispatch reporter Eric Kolenich in 2023 relentlessly reported on the fallout of Richmond-based United Network for Organ Sharing losing a crucial federal agreement. The private nonprofit organization manages the U.S. organ transplantation system and was under federal contract since 1996.

Eric's reporting uncovered how the agency dismissed whistleblower concerns, resisted change and faced sharp criticism for how racial factors were used on transplant lists.

STORIES

To access website, user is audie@lee.net and password is newspaper.

Richmond organ transplant network UNOS to be overhauled

Insiders say Richmond's organ transplantation network dismisses whistleblower concerns, resists change

Rise in organ transplants due to opioids, not UNOS progress, researchers say

Richmond's organ transplantation network sued over racial equity issue

Congress proposes split to Richmond's organ transplant system

Richmond-based UNOS to lose organ sharing contract

Senators worry Richmond's organ transplant network keeps too much power

PAGES

See the print pages here.