Nelson County Public Schools Superintendent Amanda Hester took time during a recent school board meeting to address a problem she said the division's administration is taking very seriously.

"I do want to acknowledge that we are seeing an uptick in vapes at our schools, our secondary schools are really battling this. And we're starting to see that transition where it's not just tobacco, it's THC," Hester said Feb. 9.

"Our administrators, this is what they're dealing with on a daily basis. This is what monopolizes their time."

E-cigarettes or vapes produce an aerosol by heating a liquid that usually contains nicotine, which users inhale. Vapes can also deliver marijuana or other drugs and can be made to look like regular cigarettes, pens, USB sticks and items.

Through conversations with superintendents across the state, Hester said she's learned vaping in schools is not only a concern in Nelson County or Virginia but nationwide.

In October 2022 the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) reported that of 2.55 million U.S.

plans to develop a pharmacy in the former Stoney Creek Pharmacy in Nellysford, which closed in 2019.

UVA Health Public Information Officer Eric Swensen emailed a statement to the Nelson County Times in late January.

"UVA Health is working to bring a pharmacy to Nellysford in the former Stoney Creek Pharmacy. We do not yet have a timetable for opening the pharmacy; we hope to have more details to share in the weeks ahead," Swenson wrote.

Two candidates running for South District Supervisor

Independent Mary Kathryn Allen will face Republican Jessica Ligon in the Nov. 7 election

EMMA MARTIN
The Nelson County Times

South District voters will choose between two women for the open board of supervisors seat in November's general election; both are mothers and lifelong Nelson County residents heavily involved in their communities.

Local veterinarian Jessica Ligon won the Nelson County Republican Committee's nomination for the seat in May and has talked about the successful comeback of the Lovingston Veterinary Hospital under her leadership. Ligon wants to improve transparency and communication between the board and community, curtail spending and make improvements to public schools.

"I feel that we need more accountability, more measurable re-

Ligon

Mary Kathryn Allen, current Nelson County Planning Commission chair and regional director of the Blue Ridge EMS Council. Allen thinks sports teach children important life lessons, and she wants to see the county expand sports and recreation programs for youth, while maintaining "fiscal responsibility."

"I am very much a youth advocate, whether it's in the schools, or whether it is youth sports and recreation. People say children are our future all the time, but they really are and, as a parent, I feel very passionate about making sure we do our best to set them up for success..." Allen said in an interview.

Current South District Supervisor Skip Barton confirmed he is not seeking re-election for health reasons.

Allen has worked in the emergency medical services field for 26 years and said she started as a volunteer in Nelson and Amherst counties.

"I just have a love for public service, period. I grew up in a public service family..."

She said her father, the late John Dixon, worked in law enforcement for more than 34 years, in Nelson, Amherst and Buckingham counties, and her mother worked as an emergency room nurse and ran the medical department at the Buckingham Correctional Center.

Sheriff Hill announces bid for third term

EMMA MARTIN
The Nelson County Times

Nelson County Sheriff David Hill has officially announced his bid for reelection to another four years. He faces former Nelson Patrol Supervisor Mark Embrey in the Nov. 7 election, and both candidates are running as independents.

Hill addressed voters via a live video on his campaign Facebook page Sunday.

"Serving as your sheriff of Nelson County is a continued honor and privilege. Since being elected as your sheriff in 2015 my goal has remained to represent each and every citizen of Nelson County in the best and most professional manner possible," Hill said.

In the 2015 election, Hill won 45% of the vote against another Independent, a Republican and a Democrat. In 2019, Hill garnered 55% of votes against Republican challenger Daniel Jones.

"The sheriff serves each and every citizen and should not be beholden to any political party or other public officials holding office, so I am seeking a third term as a true Independent candidate," Hill said in the video.

Hill grew up in Nelson County and holds a degree in criminal justice from Ferrum College and a master's degree in education

Celebrating Nelson greats

Earl Hamner Jr. and Jimmy Fortune statues are unveiled at the Oakland Museum in Arrington

EMMA MARTIN
The Nelson County Times

One of Nelson County's most famous sons, country singer Jimmy Fortune, sang "Elizabeth," "Virginia Dreams" and "How Great Thou Art," to an audience frequently moved to tears, raucous applause and spontaneous standing ovations during a ceremony to unveil statues of Fortune and Earl Hamner Jr., creator of "The Waltons," at the Oakland Museum on Saturday.

Nelson community members filled the shade of a large tent outside the museum in Arrington that morning, yards from two shrouded larger-than-life statues on a concrete platform.

The bronze statues, commissioned by longtime fan Lyndon Cook, would be unveiled by Fortune and members of the Hamner family later in the day, and are now permanent fixtures along U.S. 29.

Nelson County Historical Society's Woody Greenburg said Fortune told Cook he'd agree to the statue only if sculptor Stan Watts would make a statue of Hamner too.
